CONTRACT COMPLIANCE AND COMPLAINTS POLICY CONTENTS
The department or activity for which a contract has been created has the primary responsibility for monitoring and ensuring the contractor’s compliance with the terms and conditions of the contract; therefore, it is essential that department personnel involved in the project be thoroughly familiar with the contract. The Contracts Officer awarding the contract is available to assist with interpretations of terms and conditions or with any other questions related to a contract.

Procurement Services is not in a position to fully evaluate all items of purchase, only the users can do so. Therefore, the user is urged to exercise the responsibility of informing Procurement Services when dissatisfied with any items or services purchased.

Invoice Processing. Most contracts awarded by the University contain a “Payment Method” provision which should be strictly applied. It usually stipulates that payment through the State Treasurer will be made only after satisfactory completion of all work and after receipt of an invoice prepared in a format acceptable to the University. By signing the contract, the contractor has agreed to the provision. Subsequent requests to honor invoices for partially completed work should be approved only when to do so is in the best interest of the University. It is equally important to promptly complete receiving detail upon satisfactory completion of the project.
