NORFOLK, VA 23504
This program is a course of study for talented pre-college (middle and high school) students. During the three-week summer session, students receive individual and small group instruction on at least two instruments (including voice). They also receive intensive instruction in music theory (including written work), sight-singing/ear training, keyboard, music literature, and music technology. Students will participate in instrumental, keyboard, and vocal ensembles.

Located on the Norfolk State University campus, the Hamm Fine Arts Building houses keyboard and computer/music laboratories, a recording studio, and classrooms.

The goals of the program are (1) to provide an opportunity for students to improve musical skills (2) to prepare future majors for university level studies in music.
